

Is the FCC's initiative to clean up all profanities/vulgarity off the air across the country, just limited to English speaking radio/TV, or to all languages using the airwaves? It really seems that way; I recently listened to the most filthy, profane language that you can imagine in one of the Latinos' radio station. This particular program airs every morning between 0600-1000, across most of the states in the east coast, its name is " EL SHOW DE LAS MANANAS", on a radio station own by a very famous Cuban magnate. The station's name is LA MEGA. This is really " SCUM AT ITS VERY BEST". Once again; what are you guys doing about it?
